James Russ | Atomic Sphere

James Russ

An abstract representation of movement, light emanates from the sculptural framework rather than a single bulb. The Atomic is as much an art piece as it is a highly functional light source.

James Russ | Portland Wharf light

Portland wharf's hardwood timber was salvaged and stored at an old shipyard, then moved to a private collection in Kawaika where James Russ haggled for the remains. The historic timber pieces are currently being built into long, linear lights with high CRI warm white LED strip. This provides a flood of task lighting but can also be dimmed to a low light level to create intimate settings. The wood's original grain and details are protected with multiple coats of Danish oil that seals against continued aging. Each piece is unique will differ from the photos. Different choice of timber is available.
