FREESTANDING AND INSET BATHS

100% LUCITE CROSSLINKED ACRYLIC SHEET

Castano Baths are manufactured from 100% Lucite Cross Linked Acrylic Sheet, the most durable and resistant acrylic sheet available which provides a High UV Resistance and High Chemical Resistance. The story of Lucite Cross Linked Acrylic Sheet is that no other acrylic sheet is made the same way, due to the bond of cross linked technology that links one polymer chain to another creating a net structure within the acrylic sheet, providing a strong, durable acrylic sheet. When it comes to manufacturing baths, baths can be all sorts of shapes and sizes with tight radius internal corners.

100% Lucite Cross Linked Acrylic Sheet can be thermoformed at one of the lowest temperatures, providing on average a thickness of 3mm of acrylic sheet throughout the shape of the bath with tight radius, ensuring no weak points during the manufacturing process. Lucite Cross-Linked Acrylic Sheet is generally thicker than most other acrylics used in the production of baths. Lucite is owned by Lucite International Ltd controlled by Mitsubishi Chemical LTD based in Japan.

Lucite Cross Linked Acrylic provides high resistance to hot water that is over 60 degrees which can provide stable colour. Cross-Linked Acrylic Sheet used on baths is a requirement to meet EU standards such as CSN EN 263 Sanitary Products.

Ensure your next bath is constructed from 100% Lucite Cross Linked Technology, backed by Castano's Australian Wide 25 Year Warranty. Do it right the first time with Lucite Cross Linked Acrylic. Anything Else Is A Comprise

Stainless Steel

A common question is which stainless steel is right for my project, Type 304 or Type 301 or 302? While these alloys are stainless steel and very similar in content, there are some key differences, the percentages of chromium, nickel and carbon. Type 301 or 302 was developed to be a lower-cost alternative to Type 304. In order to achieve the desired lower cost, the alloy's formula was specifically developed to include less of the more expensive elements nickel and chromium and higher percentages relatively of inexpensive carbon.

Carbon is an alloying element in all types of steel as it makes brittle iron malleable and ductile. Its percentage in an alloy determines a great deal about workability, hardness and performance properties. Type 304 contains just 0.08% max carbon, it's considered the industry standard for food and beverage processing equipment.

Chromium gives the stainless steel its luster and durability. Type 304 has 18% minimum chromium content, this provides corrosion and oxidation resistance and helps to maintain the beautiful luster as if it were a new sink. Type 301 and 302 have only 16% and are more susceptible to corrosion and oxidation and looking dull over the life of the sink.

Nickel gives stainless steel hardness and strength. Type 304 with 12% nickel helps it take the abuse in all types of environments. Types 301 or 302 have only 6.0% nickel creating a greater chance for the sink to show wear.

HYGIENE

The easy cleaning ability of stainless makes it the first choice for strict hygiene conditions, such as hospitals, kitchens and other food processing facilities.

GREEN

All manufacturing process create a carbon foot print, the amount of carbon emitted during the production process.

In the case of stainless steel, the emission is 0.04% than that of regular. All Castano kitchen sinks are constructed using the finest quality. Type 304 stainless steel.

It's 100% Green and 100% recyclable.

ARMANI

Engineered stone is a stone that is manufactured in a factory. While the main component of engineered stone is quartz, one of the strongest minerals in the world, the rest of it is completely man-made. Engineered stone has been used in homes and as stone benchtops for over 40 years. Resilient and easy to clean

Non porous and hygienically safe

No need for harsh cleaning products

Timeless elegance that offers a long term investment. It's no surprise that people are drawn to the unique beauty of stone for their bathroom benchtop, but the added benefits of durability, practicality, being easy to clean and long-term value make it the first choice for vanities.
