

Contemporary curves
in Forest Lodge

The curves, colours and marble added movement, softness and cohesion throughout this Colonial terrace home. In the kitchen, all appliances were integrated behind beautiful white tongue and groove panels or Tasmanian oak half dowl. The vertical lines from both styles of joinery gave the illusion of higher ceilings and more space. The tongue and groove style was also incorporated in the entertainment unit. This custom unit was designed with sliding doors that could conceal the television, decorative bookcase or both. The timber veneer that was used in the unit was also used to create additional seating in the living area. The master suite, ensuite and walk-in wardrobe were also accented with the tongue and groove and half dowl style.
